

Hyalite Cyn.

Date

Sun, 03/07/2021 - 15:34

Activity

Skiing

Hey guys,

No pics for you. Probably nothing new to you either but I was able to observe deep slab avalanches in almost every n facing cirque above treeline as far as the eye could see from Mt Blackmore summit today. Mt. Bole and Alex Lowe to name a few. All right below Ridgeline and I suspect ran about the same time as the big one on Blackmore and Flanders and the hanging bowl on Elephant head. Clearly this was a very big cycle in the N Gallatin's, sparing very few slopes. Quite impressive to see really. Most debris had a skiff of new over it and the winds were cranking out of the SW. Not gusty, just sustained, face burning wind.

Cheers,

Andrew

Region

Northern Gallatin

Location (from list)

Mt Blackmore

Observer Name

Andrew Newman